

Estimated Undergraduate Cost of Attendance, 2018-2019

Each year Student Financial Services establishes standard estimates to help families determine their financial needs for the year, and for financial aid awarding purposes. This page contains estimates of the Cost of Attendance for one year (Fall and Spring semesters) at the University of Virginia, including tuition and fees, housing, dining, personal expenses and travel. For a breakdown of the comprehensive fee components, please follow this link.

Upon request, a student's budget may be increased to cover the cost of health insurance. The allowable amount for 2018-2019 is $2,830.

The following information pertains to undergraduate students only. Follow this link for the estimated Cost of Attendance for graduate students. You can also get a more detailed personal estimate of your likely undergraduate cost of attendance by using the Tuition and College Cost Estimator.

Please note that if you leave the University for any reason and return in a later semester, you will be subject to the tuition and fee rates established by the Board of Visitors for the academic year in which you return, based upon your academic level upon your return. Your school of enrollment can confirm your academic level.

Undergraduate Living Expenses

The following estimated expenses apply to students in any undergraduate program. They are listed as "Living Expenses" in the subsequent estimated Cost of Attendance tables for each program. Please note that independent undergraduate student budgets differ by the inclusion of a health insurance amount for the year.

The personal expenses estimates shown below reflect modest and restrained expense allowances for University of Virginia students. Some students will spend more than the estimated amounts while others will spend less, depending on individual lifestyles and circumstances. Eligibility for financial aid, however, is based on the standard estimated allowance, not on individual preferences and spending habits.
